

Security Product Training

IDsec offers a range of training courses that allow users to get the most out of security products. This includes a number of industry favourites as well as products supplied by us.

Many products are claimed to offer value “straight out of the box”, but we recognise that system managers, integrators and users often need some specific education in order to get the best out of a new deployment. We have therefore joined with Computerlinks to offer training courses in a range of popular products for both beginners and advanced users.

Courses normally take place in central London. Call us for more details, including prices and dates.
